ABSTRACT

The current era of democracy has been wide open after the reform was rolled out in 1998. This has made the world of politics more vibrant in Indonesia. As a result, this condition has a positive impact on the portrait of politics in the country. So that affects the life of the nation and state. Through a democratic system that has been implemented so far, the people can become policy makers in choosing their leaders constitutionally. The political climate is increasingly competitive, where every political party including the Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle (PDIP) also fights fiercely in political contestation through various approaches to political communication strategies that are prepared as well as possible. Based on these conditions, the researchers conducted research related to Political Marketing Communication Strategy brand awareness building for Beginner Voter in the Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle (PDIP) in Tangerang Regency.

This study uses a qualitative approach with a single case study design. While relating to the research context, case studies are used to examine the application of the Political Marketing Communication Strategy in Building brand awareness in Beginner Voters regarding the Tangerang Regency Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle (PDIP) through the SOSTAC marketing strategy approach including: Situation, Objective, Strategy, Tactics, Action , Control. The researcher only examined this case and did not do comparative research with other cases

The results showed that the Tangerang Regency Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle (PDIP) implemented a political marketing communication strategy through the SOSTAC approach which included situation analysis, setting an objective, formulating a strategy, implementing tactics (tactics), implementing implementation (action), and finally the implementation of supervision. With a brief explanation as follows: 1) The process of determining the direction of the party policy (objective), should be in accordance with measurable and clear targets, 2) The campaign message is suggested to use the selection of words that are more in line with the target / target of the campaign namely the beginner voters. But it remains in line with the vision and mission and direction of party struggle, 3) Party political communicators are advised from the local young figures who are representative and have credibility, are known and liked by the public, 4) In the process of controlling public opinion on social media, parties should by media monitoring applications, so that the party can youngly know the positioning of public brand awareness.
