

ABSTRACT

Good governance in a State is a necessity as a form of accountability to the people. This study aims to assess the impact of the implementation of good governance to financial performance and employee performance at Bogor Presidential Palace Household in year 2008 and 2009

The method used is descriptive comparative methods by comparing performance before and after good governance. Comparative analysis of financial performance is based on the financial statements for 2008 and 2009, while for the performance of employees is done by comparing the achievement of performance targets between that period.

The Results of analysis concludes that implementation of good governance has a positive effect on financial performance and employee performance at Bogor Presidential Palace Households, this is indicated by increased levels of financial performance is in terms of revenue receipts over the implementation of tax and non-tax levies, although the budget allocation received from the government declined but its realization is increasing.

Then in terms of employee performance has shown improvement in the field of community service by improving procurement means of information and publicity, more and more visitors coming to the Bogor Palace, then the public service is increasing. So was the service areas of administration and implementation of maintenance work of art objects and maintenance of office equipment also increased