ABSTRACT

Making public service advertisements is something that researchers do to help provide education about the importance of sunbathing not only during the Covid-19 pandemic, but also after that, it is hoped that it can become a routine activity every day. An Art Designer who works after the scriptwriter process. The making of a public service advertisement "Let's just take 5 minutes, sunbathing is fun" is expected to convey a message that people can realize that sunbathing is also important to do.

This research focuses more on the Art Design section, how an Art Designer is able to create a work in the form of a video which is then visualized so that it can be enjoyed by the general public.

This public service advertisement "Let's just have 5 minutes, sunbathing is fun" tells about how people carry out sunbathing activities, starting from housewives, students, office employees, and also hospital medical personnel. By doing some stretching, it is hoped that sunbathing activities can provide benefits in the form of increasing body immunity and also getting vitamin D which is good for the skin and human body.

Based on the research and the process of making an applicative short film, it can be concluded that: (1) In the process of making a public service advertisement "Come on, it's just 5 minutes, sunbathing is fun", the process of making public service advertisements goes through stages starting from the pre-service stage. production, production, to post-production, the writer in the role of Art Design is tasked with visualizing the concept of the Producer's mind, as well as conveying the message that is converted into a storyline created by the scriptwriter and then changing the message in the form of Audio Visual so that the message contained can be easily received by the scriptwriter. community (2) public service advertisements "Come on, it's enough for 5 minutes, sunbathing is fun" helps researchers in increasing their editing technical skills, as well as conveying messages through verbal and non-verbal communication through typography, color and music made in public service advertisements with non-drama genres musical.
