This research aims to analyze the effect of work ability and workload on the employee performance and work stress as a mediation variable in the General Election Supervisory Agency in DKI Jakarta Province. The population of this study were Non-Government Employees with a sample of 100 employees. Data analysis method used Structural equation model partial least square (SEM-PLS). The results revealed that the variable of work ability affected the variable of work stress negatively and significantly. The workload variables affected the work stress variable positively and significantly. Work stress variables significantly affected employee performance negatively. Work ability variables affected employee performance positively and significantly. Workload variables affected employee performance variables positively but not significantly. Meanwhile, work stress variables had no effect on mediating work ability variable to the employee performance variable. Besides, work stress variables mediated the effect of workload variables on employee performance variables.
