This study aims to measure the effect of advertising jingles on brand attitude. by using the case example of Gulaku's Advertising Jingle "The Archies – Sugar, sugar" as an independent variable and Gulaku's Brand Attitude as the dependent variable. The research question is: How big is the influence of The Archies ad jingle – Sugar, sugar on the brand attitude of Gulaku?

This study tests the theory put forward by Ehrenberg (1974) which explains that advertising can influence audiences to produce a relatively continuous group of people using or buying the advertised product through several stages, namely awareness, trial and reinforcement (ATR Model). Then, Morrisan (2010) explained that advertising has a role to create a positive attitude towards a brand or change a negative attitude to be positive.

This study uses a survey method. A survey questionnaire was distributed to the sample population, and the survey included questions about advertising jingles, brand attitudes, and demographic information. The collected data were analyzed using simple regression analysis to determine and measure the influence of advertising jingles on brand attitude.

The results showed that advertising jingles had a positive effect on brand attitude by 44.7%. Data analysis shows that the dimensions of memorability and meaningfulness in advertising jingles have the greatest influence on the conative dimension of brand attitude. Advertising jingles that are easy to remember, easy to recognize, and contain descriptive messages that are packaged persuasively can influence audience attitudes towards a brand.
