

Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship between Intimacy and Stress in housewives. The population in this study were housewives domiciled in Kebayoran Lama, South Jakarta and Larangan, Ciledug-Tangerang. The sampling technique uses purposive sampling. Data collection uses the Intimacy and Stress scale. The data analysis technique used is the Spearman correlation with the results obtained at -0.653 with p value <0.05. So the results of this study indicate that H1 is accepted which means there is a significant negative correlation in the study of the relationship between intimacy and stress in housewives.

Keywords: Intimacy, Stress, Housewives.

